NEW YORK SHOWS WAY IN DISTANCE RACING

By J. W. MARCHBANK

It looks as though Tanforan will have to do some more pioneering. There is a pressing need of furnishing entertainment that comes only from long races and I am working on a plan to fill the gap. In the distance events I have in mind will be stakes performers, not the "platers" we have sometimes seen in contests at a mile and a half or two miles.

Route affairs are the only thing lacking to round out our programs at the San Bruno track each spring and fall. It may take a year or two to stir up sufficient momentum East and West to make the race or races of national importance.

It took a number of years to prepare for the first meeting at Tanforan in the spring of 1930. Last year I announced the Tanforan Futurity would be inaugurated in 1938 and, as the breeders of the country have been advised, entries for that two year old struggle at one mile will close the fifteenth of next month. So I must be considered as an old hand at long range planning.

New York has its Belmont Stakes, Lawrence Realization and cup events and generally does yeoman service in offering races that test both the speed and stamina of the nation's thoroughbreds carrying worth-while burdens.

Why should we, on the other edge of the continent, be content with sprints, sprints, sprints? A mile or a mile and a sixteenth is a suitable distance for two year olds in the fall, but must be classified only as sprints for the mature division.

It is admitted on all sides that the only way to preserve the fundment of the blood horse is to make use of his endurance powers. As a spectacle, too, the long race has an appeal of its own. Furthermore there is nothing to equal a route event in proving the skill of a conditioner or the almost uncanny ability of a jockey in rating a horse in a breath-taking contest at a mile and a half or more. Little attention would have been aroused in Omaha's invasion of England if he had been shipped over the Atlantic to run a mile or a mile and a sixteenth. He's a true stayer and able to put up a brilliant exhibition under strange conditions at a mile and a half, two miles, or two miles and a half.

BEACH NUDISTS SENTENCED TO SIX MONTHS IN JAIL

Indecent Exposure Adjacent Beaches Not To Be Tolerated

Justice of the Peace Wade H. Clay, on Tuesday of this week, sentenced Frank Zverina and Justus Urban to six months each for parading Thornton Beach, at the foot of the new Coastside highway just below Colma, in nature's garb.

The arrests were made by Deputy George Kruehl on instructions of Sheriff James McGrath, who is waging an anti-nude campaign in the county, particularly at the beaches, where many people have complained of seeing naked persons cavorting and cutting pranks.

In sentencing the men in his court in Daly City, Judge Clay remarked: "There is no excuse for their conduct; there were other people on the beach at the time; they admitted being without clothing; there is nothing to do but send them to jail."

STATE FAIR IS EXPECTED TO BE BEST YET HELD

Noted Judges Have Been Secured For Various
Livestock Exhibits

Assurances that the livestock show at the California State Fair, September 5 to 14, will be one of the greatest in history of the 82 year old exposition are given in the consent of seven outstanding livestock judges in the United States and Canada to determine the winners.

Those chosen from five states and Canada to do the judging are: W. L. Carlyle, manager of the King of England's Ranch in Calgary, Canada; John C. Burns, Fort Worth, Texas, nationally known in beef cattle circles; L. A. Weaver of Columbia, Mo., authority on swine; Hugh G. Van Pelt, Waterloo, Iowa, noted livestock judge; H. M. King, Vancouver, B. C.; E. F. Rhinehart, Boise, Idaho; Tom Drummond of Mt. Haggan Ranch, Anaconda, Mont. The last two named men are authorities on sheep.

Fred H. Bixby, Long Beach, chairman of the livestock division, announces that there will be one and maybe two stock parades. Bixby's department is handling an early rush of entries.

Unusual interest is reported in the machinery and manufacturer's division of which W. A. Kennedy, Pomona, is chairman. This show is the largest of its kind West of the Rockies.

Kennedy is optimistic over having the best of all the farm machinery shows this year.

ANOTHER FINE PROGRAM TO BE STAGED AT BADEN

Eleven Fast Races And Another Appearance Of Broadcasting Star

Baden Kennel Club will stage its third annual benefit program for the San Mateo County Council, American Legion, tomorrow night. Gate proceeds, it was announced today, will go to the county veteran's organization.

The racing program of eleven fast events will bring out many of the championship contenders at all distances, according to Presiding Judge H. M. Barton. With the best field of high class racing dogs assembled since 1932, it has been difficult to find any one dog which stands out among his fellows, the judge declares.

In the grandstand spotlight tomorrow night will be Robert Stevens, popular San Francisco National Broadcasting Company star. Stevens was a member of the quartet which appeared at the South San Francisco track last week, and the fans gave him such an ovation that the management signed him for tomorrow night's entertainment program.

TO STAGE ORIENTAL PAGEANT FOR COLORFUL FLORAL FIESTA

Elaborate plans are being made for the colorful Oriental pageant which will feature San Mateo County's second annual products and Floral Fiesta to be held at Bay Meadows for four days opening October 8.

The story of the pageant is that of a beautiful princess in search of a prince worthy of her hand. More than 300 men, women and children will participate in the show, which promises to be one of the most colorful ever presented in the state of California.

The pageant, under direction of Fred Carlyle, will be a nightly feature of the program for the four days of the show. Due to the success of last year's show, Carlyle was again engaged to supervise this year's pageant.

Amid a floral setting, colorfully costumed actors and elaborate scenic effects, the story will be told by well trained actors. Hundred of voices especially trained for the occasion will accompany the libretto, while junior college, high school and elementary school students will participate in the production.

Other divisions of the county wide Fiesta are rapidly taking form. Bruce Gibson, Fiesta commission president, is busy himself with various phases of the show, while County Agricultural Commissioner Max Leonard is aiding the exhibition's agricultural features.

Martin Poss, manager of the Fiesta announced this week that other features of the Fiesta will be announced later.

PROTEST PRIVATE OWNERSHIP

Supervisor Al Witt of First Township, U. S. Marshall, county engineer, and Hugh Pomeroy, advisor to the County Planning Commission, Monday scored the County Harbor Commission for "going over the heads" of local constituted authorities, in applying to the San Francisco harbor lines board to establish pier lines and boundaries in the South San Francisco vicinity.

District Attorney Gilbert Ferrell was instructed to gather data, then submit it to the supervisors to draft a harbor development program.

Charges that the harbor board were apparently trying to promote the interests of private individuals by their action were heard.

Scoring the harbor action, Supervisor Witt declared: "This is one of the most important matters confronting the county at present, and our industrial future is at stake."

SUPERVISORS GIVE ATTORNEY NEW DEPUTY

County To Have Sherlock Holmes In D. A. Office, Also Another Stenographer.

The County Board of Supervisors on Monday voted an appropriation for a deputy district attorney, whose duty it will be to act as undercover agent and gather evidence in criminal cases in addition to handling estates of persons who die and leave no heirs.

Salary of the new deputy will be $2700 a year.

District Attorney Gilbert Ferrell needs the added help, he claims, to curb vice and gambling, and cited the fact that his present staff is insufficient to fully carry out the duties of his office.

The ordinance creating the new office also carried a provision providing for an extra stenographer at a salary of $115 per month.

Investigation of alleged gambling and slot machine racket is expected to be the first assignment of the new deputy.

THE SMOOTHNESS TEST

It is rather simple to test the efficiency of the car's electrical system, distributor, spark plugs, etc. Try running at various speeds on the lower range of the speedometer.

Roughness of operation may be due to a poor valve adjustment but it also provides an excellent clue to inefficient ignition.

EXPERIENCED HOUSEWIFE CLUB

(By Maude Larue Ives)

There is a hard brown-shelled oval fruit of a tropical palm tree that is familiar everywhere. It is sometimes used in its natural state and sometimes in shredded form. Boys and girls like to break the thick, hairy shells of the nuts and eat the sweet, white interior and drink its cool milk. This nutty fruit, the coconut, figures largely as an important ingredient used in cakes, pies, puddings and candy.

The story is told that ages ago a tall straight palm grew near a tropical ocean. Its naked trunk, sixty to one hundred feet in height, was topped with a crown of feathery leaves, among which hung a cluster of a dozen or more nuts. One day, possibly, a monkey climbed up to look for food and shook down a few ripe nuts, which fell into the water, floated away and were washed to the shore at spots here and there.

In time palms sprang from these nuts, and later on the coasts of India and the islands of the South Seas were covered with the trees. From a more recent authority in the United States Department of Agriculture the theory is advanced that this tree first originated in the interior of Columbia, South America.

Now coconuts are not known to grow wild naturally, but are produced for commerce on plantations and Florida now produces an abundant supply for winter tourists.

The three dark spots at one end of the coconut are the "eyes" from which roots and stems grow when the nuts are germinated.

In tropical climes the nut is an important article of food to the natives. The fruit is eaten ripe or green; the cabbage like bud at the top of the tree is edible when boiled. Palm wine is made from the sap. When distilled it produces a strong liquor known as arrack. The roots, which are narcotic in effect, are chewed by the natives. The coconut oil or butter is used for oleomargarine, soap, shampoo preparations and candles. The dried kernel is shipped to other countries under the name of copra. From this, oil is made. The leaves of the tree are used to thatch cottages and for forage. The mid rib of the leaf is made by the natives into spears, arrows and torches. Many of the mats on which we wipe our feet are made of coconut fibre. From the coconut shell, cups, ladles and other useful and ornamental utensils are made.

The following recipe, Coconut Chicken, gives the coconut shell still another use, that of a thermos casserole. Mrs. Schreiber, 925 Hanover street, is now a member of our club.

Coconut Chicken

One spring chicken, four fresh coconuts. Saw tops off as evenly as possible. Two ears green corn (shaved from cob) or one small can of corn, three slices of bacon (diced), two medium sized onions, one chopped green pepper, six small tomatoes, one clove of garlic (chopped), one teaspoon salt, three tablespoons shredded coconut meat.

Scrape out half of coconut meat to allow room for filling. Mix shredded coconut meat and corn. Brown bacon and sliced onion, add green pepper and cloves of garlic, chopped fine. Add to this tomatoes, which have been previously stewed, with salt and pepper. Then cook all together until it thickens. Strain and add to the coconut meat and corn and lastly the diced or shredded cooked meat of the chicken. Fill coconut shells, covering each with cut off tops, and seal with flour paste. To keep shells from scorching set in baking pan containing about an inch of water. Bake one hour in hot oven and baste with water at ten minute intervals.

The contents of a coconut thus prepared and sealed will remain hot for five or six hours.

White Cookies

(from The Farmer's Wife)

One and a half cups sugar, two thirds cup butter or nucoa, one egg, one half cup sour milk or buttermilk, one half teaspoon soda, pinch of salt. Flour to roll out, cut with cookie cutter and place raisins in center. Bake in 350 degree oven until nicely browned. Cream butter and sugar before adding the well beaten egg.

Household Suggestions

When filling gem pans, leave one of the small sections empty and fill with water. The gems will never scorch.—From Elaine Hughes.

Cut out old canes in raspberry bushes when they are through bearing fruit. These canes will never bear fruit again.

Cloths saturated with polishing liquids if stored away in a closet often cause spontaneous combustion. Keep these cloths in a covered tin container.

Lingerie must be tinted occasionally to preserve its dainty appearance. A faded blue garment will tint a delicate orchid with the aid of a pink dye, a pale yellow will shade into a delicate green if dipped in blue dye and a pink dye will change the yellow to a shell pink. Be sure to use small quantities of the dye for these pastel shades.

Oil or oily substances should never be used on waxed floors. They soften the wax, sink into wood and eventually darken it.

A pinch of baking soda added to the water in which a fowl is cooked will make it more tender.

A cup of peanut butter mixed with half a cup of mayonnaise and one finely chopped raw onion makes a good sandwich spread.

When making pastry use only enough water to hold ingredients together. Mix quickly, roll and handle as little as possible if you wish pastry to be flaky.

CHAPTER X

"Not a word to anybody," Harwood had said. "Dig in 'til I phone you. One little leak, and we're finished."

Barry saw that. But why should Harwood fear the leak coming from him? Pat? Fears! Winslow, of course, who was Morano's lawyer. But Ernie had said, "Winslow isn't that kind of a lawyer." And he had said also, "If Winslow's shielding anyone, it's Judge Hambridge. Judge Hambridge, or someone else close to him." Except Winslow, who was close to Judge Hambridge, but Pat?

Into Barry's mind trickled slowly small, insistent recollections—one after another. Recollections that, in the beginning, seemed to have nothing to do with the case. Pat was in town the night of the murder. Naturally—with her father; what of it? "He wouldn't let me stay with him," she had said, at dinner the next evening in Southampton. What of it?

But the trickle was becoming a flood now. The afternoon Hambridge had confessed seeing Kelly, why did Pat keep checking the Judge? What did she fear his disclosing? And the confession itself; why did he make it?

"I'm off again," Barry raged at himself. "Just because Ernie said, 'Winslow may be shielding Hambridge, or someone close to him.' That might mean someone close to Winslow. But who's closer than the Hambridges?" And then he remembered declaring, the afternoon of the Judge's confession, "The man—or the woman—who killed Kelly knew what he—or she—was going to do."

"Why do you say 'she'?" Pat had asked, emotionally. "This wasn't a woman's crime."

Winslow had asserted, too; only a few hours ago: "That man." Curious. And motive? Well, you couldn't deny that. If Kelly was threatening Judge Hambridge, and Pat knew it. There was no doubt that she did. "I've got something in my pocket," the Judge had quoted Kelly as shouting, and Pat had intervened promptly. All those weeks, before the decision was filed, she had writhed under the newspaper attacks on her father. Suppose she had known what was compelling that decision, and undertaken to remove the compulsion. "Silly!" Barry fumed at himself. "Fantastic!"

The house of cards was a wreck now, and Barry turned to other self-questionings. "That paper in Kelly's pocket—the threat over Luis. But it seems to have been the threat over Hambridge, also. What's the connection?"

"None," he finally decided, interring that idea, too, and turning in bed, determined that he must sleep. "Something between Morano and Kelly, yes, but between Morano and Judge Hambridge—well, that's just beet-tops!" With that he fell asleep.

The telephone wakened him. "Ten o'clock," the girl at the switchboard droned. "Call from Southampton."

"Mr. Gilbert? This is the hospital at Southampton. Miss Hambridge asked me to tell you that Jack Rogers has been hurt. We don't know how badly yet. His horse threw him. She'd like to know if you can come at once."

"Certainly."

"Miss Hambridge says, if you'll go straight to her house, she'll be there."

Fortunately, he got Evans at once, and they were on the Merrick road less than an hour later. "Never mind the red lights," Barry ordered. "Keep going."

But Evans was wary, beating the lights when it seemed safe to do so; stopping when it didn't, and pushing the car to its limit on stretches of unpaved highway. Before two o'clock, Evans drew up in front of the Hambridges'. Pat was waiting.

"I've just this minute got back from the hospital," she declared. "Peg's still there, of course. But Jack's arm's broken."

"Nothing worse?"

Pat shook her head.

"The whole thing's my fault," she said, tremulously. "Jack's too young for a pony. Although I had one at his age."

She took him into the drawing-room, where they were joined by her father, who seemed terribly broken.

Between them, they told Barry what had happened. A bit of paper had blown across the pony's eyes, and he had bolted, with Pat after him. She got hold of the bridle, but the frantic little animal had dragged her out of her saddle. Still she had clung, until, maddened, the pony had bucked, and thrown his small rider. Pat had let go then; not without visible and invisible casualties to skin and clothes.

Pat's nerves were on edge, and Hambridge rambled on about the "poor kid," and this being "the last straw" for Peggy, and what were they going to do now, with the Ridders coming to Southampton.

And, suddenly, Pat said, "This is Wednesday."

Barry conceded the point.

"We agreed to tell the truth if Jack wasn't free Wednesday."

The Judge's muscles stiffened.

"What do you mean by the truth, Pat?"

"That you saw Kelly after Jack left him."

For answer, Hambridge turned squarely to Barry.

"You're pretty shrewd, Mr. Gilbert," he said, for the second time. "If you were the District Attorney, and heard what I told you here a few weeks ago, what would you ask?"

Barry replied, "I'd ask what was that paper in Kelly's pocket? What was it to compel an honest man to write a crooked decision? I'd ask who else might have wanted that paper—and what became of it?"

Both Pat and her father were staring at Barry now, with wide, startled eyes in which lay something like terror.

The Judge cried, "We can't face that."

"We've got to face it," Pat said. "We've got to. There's a woman with a sick boy—"

"There's another woman, too," the Judge interrupted. "A woman closer and dearer to me—"

He checked himself, remembering suddenly that he and his daughter were not alone. Remembering, he turned back to Barry. "You know how I feel about all this," he pleaded. "I've said repeatedly that we must clear Riddler at any cost. But now you've put my fear into words. They can't convict this boy. What's the difference whether he's free tomorrow or two weeks from tomorrow? If there were any possibility of convicting an innocent man—any innocent man—I'd have no choice. But now—"

The telephone rang in the hall.

"Mr. Winslow on the wire," a servant announced. "Very important, sir."

The Judge went out, closing the door after him.

Pat excused herself. "I think I'd better go to my father."

Barry waited, alone, but his anxiety was great, too, and, at last, he opened the double doors and went into the drawing room.

As he did so, he heard the Judge's voice.

Evidently, Hambridge had just hung up the phone, and was addressing his daughter.

"They've arrested Morano," he said. "For murdering Kelly. What are we going to do now?"

But the girl had seen Barry. Her hand closed over the back of a chair, and she swayed dizzily.

Barry caught her up in his arms.

"It's no use. We've got to have the truth. Who murdered Mike Kelly?"

His grip tightened on her shoulders. "For God's sake—Pat—darling—was it you?"

"Who murdered Mike Kelly?"

The question was being asked him from every news-stand in New York.

Beneath it, in huge headlines, the Globe answered, and accused. In journalistic circles, that story is still referred to as "the big beat": "Who murdered Mike Kelly?"

For Answer, Hambridge Turned Squarely to Barry.

dered Mike Kelly?" "Do the police know?" "Have they always known?" "And has this knowledge been pigeonholed, while an innocent man was held for the crime, because the real murderer knew too much about Tammany Hall?"

The Globe replied to these queries in a series of denunciatory statements, libel-proofed by a discreet sprinkling of the usual "it is alleged" and "who is said to be."

"Luis Morano owned the house at 24 Jefferson street. He bought it in 1929, and lived there alone, with two colored servants, until 1931, when he purchased a stock farm near Morristown, N. J. The house remained vacant, and last January, Morano sold it to the Progressive Realty company for $12,000.

"In March, when the Progressive company transferred most of Jefferson street to the city for a so-called boulevard, the value of the Morano property was set at $35,000.

"The Civic association alleged that the Progressive company was merely a stalking horse for Boss Kelly, and condemnation proceedings were instituted before Judge Curtis Hambridge, whose decision was filed only an hour after Kelly was found dead, his skull fractured by a blow from a heavy cut-glass decanter.

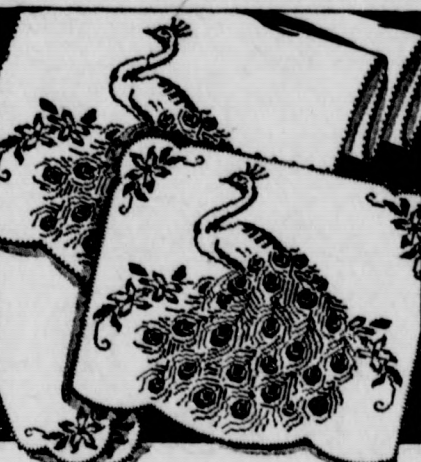

"On the day of the murder, a man, believed to be Morano, telephoned the Globe that he could and would establish Kelly's connection with the Progressive company. An appointment was made for 10:30 that night. The man did not appear.

"But at eight o'clock—two hours and a half earlier—Kelly went to the Coconut Bar. He is said to have had with him two henchmen, and a paper of some sort, with which he threatened Morano. Kelly alleged that an effort was made to pick his pocket of this document, but it was still in his possession when he left the Coconut Bar.

"When Kelly's body was found, the paper had vanished. All this is, and always has been known to the police,

The Dictator's Job

Dictators have the hardest job in the world, which is to keep on dictating. Sooner or later they are caught in a vicious circle, because people—over a long period—can no more be stopped from thinking than they can be stopped from breathing. A dictatorship tightens and tightens and then either (a) loosens up in order to survive, or (b) breaks down in counter-revolution or counter-dictatorship. In each case the people, to some degree, are thrown back on their capacity for self-government — John Gunther in Cosmopolitan.

A Lesson in Loyalty

When a dog experiences that transition we know by the stark name of death it affects us the more poignantly because he goes over the horizon with such magnificent valor.

I have had my heart wrenched many times by a close-up of this extraordinary courage. Invariably dogs meet what mankind regards as the terror of terrors with a beautiful complacency, an instinct, if you will, that should hearten us all for a journey that is inevitable.

Dogs have taught those of us who love them many excellent things. Foremost, perhaps, is the divine quality, loyalty. They have also taught the art of forgiveness and forthright honesty.

So it does not seem at all strange to me that they should help us to banish fear of the last enemy. I had a dog whose obedience to my command sent him to death under a careening joy-rider's wheels. He crawled back to me, licked my hand as though to say, "I don't blame you" and stiffened in death.—O. O. McIntyre in Cosmopolitan.

SOCIAL POINT OF VIEW IS GAINING HEADWAY

By J. W. MARCHBANK
Pioneer in Frontier Mining Work

If Victor Hugo were living he would certainly take a lively interest in the working out of the New Deal in this country. The great writer was always battling for what he considered was the highest interest of the people. He had a faculty, too, of distinguishing between the meaning of terms in which many men see no difference.

In all of the late addresses of President Roosevelt it is easy to see his objective is equity. As Hugo pointed out, equity is not to be confused with justice. His character, Gauvain, in Quatrevingt-Treize, undoubtedly was the voice for many of the opinions of the author himself. A few hours before being led to the guillotine Gauvain, a noble turned revolutionary, in a memorable conversation with his old friend, Cimourdain, said:

"I understand thoroughly the tremendous concession each member of a social organism must make to society and at the same time the concession the social organism must make to each of its members."

The other half of the colloquy could not see that at all. He expressed the belief there is nothing outside the strict interpretation of the law. He offered:

"I see only justice."
Gauvain came back:
"I look higher."
"What is there higher than justice?"

"Equity."
Elucidating a bit, we have the old distinction between a court of law and a court of equity. As is well known, a court of equity is a court which corrects the operation of the literal text of the law. That is, equity construes laws according to their benignant spirit. That, surely, is the aim of the New Deal.

A strong plea for the kind of moderation made so familiar by President Roosevelt in the carrying out of liberal policies was made recently in an editorial in the Vancouver Sun. It is right in line with many enlightening observations of the liberal paper in the north. The thesis is: "Immoderation leads without hesitation to dictatorship and dictatorship plunges the masses into slavery."

The editor believes that just as immoderation in Germany destroyed the long patient work of German Labor, so will immoderation in France inevitably destroy the painful building of French Labor.

Recently The Nation pertinently said that the Republicans have shown that seven years of depression have taught them nothing fundamental about statesmanship and that three years of absence from office have only sharpened their hunger. As the liberal weekly points out:

"That was the meaning of the noise at Cleveland."

The ever perspicacious Heywood Brown expects the President to tackle W. R. Hearst by name sooner or later and also at no distant date to suggest an amendment to the constitution, probably along the line of national legislation in regard to labor and to farming.

The so-called interest of the Republicans in state's rights sounds too much like the Feudalism of the Middle Ages to arouse much enthusiasm among the rank and file of voters in the country.

Township Clubs Meet

The Five Township Clubs, formerly the First Township Clubs, met, Sunday afternoon, in Bayshore City.

Several candidates were present, but no indorsements as yet have been made.

Refreshments were served and all present enjoyed a pleasant afternoon. About fourteen members from Daly City were present.

A shepherd dog at Buena Vista, Colo., which had lost her only puppy, adopted a baby jack rabbit which her owner caught for her.

Before she testified in a damage case, Miss Ella Raynes of Chicago, was ordered by the judge to take her gum out of her mouth.

STATE LEAGUE TEAM DEFEATS SAN BRUNO CLUB

Injury To Player Mars Contest At High School Diamond

An otherwise good game of ball was marred, last Sunday at the Jefferson Union High School diamond, by a serious injury to one of the players.

Fred Caviglia, pitcher for the San Bruno Tanforans, had the misfortune to break a bone in his ankle during a play at second base in the second inning. He had reached first on a hit and in an attempt to steal second slid into the bag and caught his spikes on the anchor peg. He was relieved by Barr.

The accident seemed to dishearten the other players, and the result was a listless game throughout.

The San Bruno boys have a well balanced team and have been playing heads up baseball all season. There were no outstanding features worth mentioning and the contest as a whole resolved itself into a yawning, hum drum affair.

ALCAZAR PLAY DRAWS PRAISE FROM CRITICS

In addition to setting up new popularity and long run laugh records in America, "Three Men on a Horse," now playing at the Alcazar Theatre in San Francisco, also broke theatrical precedent in the number of letters, wires and comments of extravagant praise it has called forth throughout the country.

The following excerpts give a fair idea of the reaction of stage and screen celebrities toward the rollicking hit.

"The funniest play in years," George Burns and Gracie Allen.

"It's terrific," said Ben Bernie.

"Best comedy I have seen," Claudette Colbert.

"I wouldn't miss 'Three Men on a Horse' if it cost $10 a seat," Walter Winchell.

"It pays 100 to 1 in laughs," Joe E. Brown.

"The laugh time of my life," commented Charlotte Greenwood.

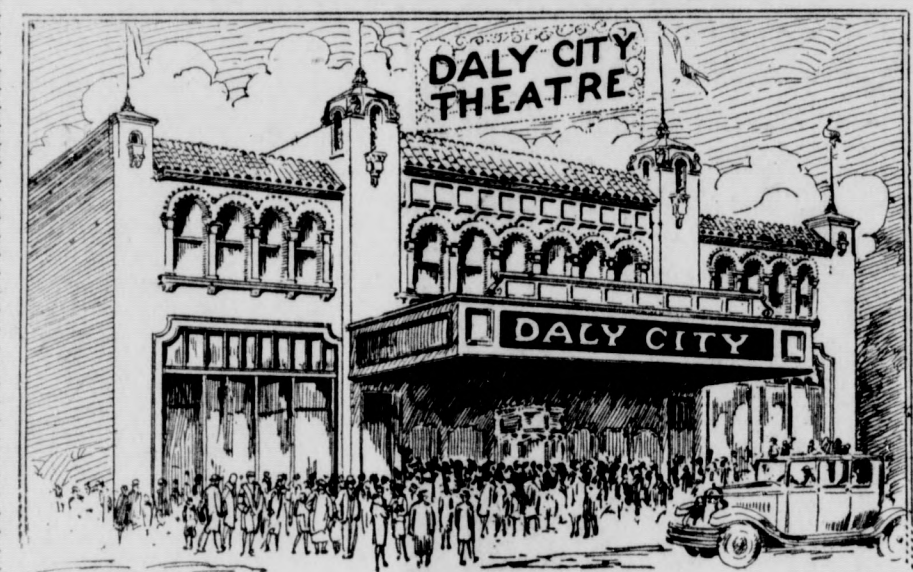

Not only has praise been bestowed upon the authors for their clever dialogue and situations in "Three Men on a Horse," but Henry Duffy has also received high praise for the excellent company of funsters that are helping greatly to make the play the success that it is at the Alcazar.

Mrs. Myrtle Schlappi In Church Reading

FRIENDS OF COTTON PREDICT BIG VOTE

JUDGE A. R. COTTON

Politics is something with which we should all concern ourselves, but with which most of us don't, because of the shadow cast over it by the improper actions of some officials entrusted with high places in the administration of public affairs, according to Col. Charles N. Kirkbride, outstanding county attorney and civic leader of San Mateo.

"How refreshing it is then," Col. Kirkbride adds, "to find a man like Superior Judge Aylett R. Cotton in office, and how interesting and worthwhile it becomes to do all one can to continue such a man in such an important post."

Friends of Judge Cotton are predicting that he will poll a new record high vote at the August 25 election.

The Golden Text will be: "This is life eternal, that they might know thee the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom thou hast sent" (John 17: 3). FISHING IS GOOD

They planned to travel by auto as far as the highway goes and then hike along the trails for a day to their camp, packing in their supplies. Just a tip fellows, they say the fishing is good there.

JUDGE COTTON IS ON VACATION FOR TWO WEEKS

Hopes To Continue Service To Youthful Offenders Brought Before Him

Before leaving this week on his annual vacation trip of two weeks, Judge Aylett R. Cotton, candidate to succeed himself at the August 25 election, expressed high confidence in the work his thousands of friends are doing on his behalf all over the county. He said it was impressive, indeed, to know that his service in the county generally, and on the bench for the past year and a half, have stirred such keen interest and support among the electorate.

"You know," Judge Cotton said, "this serving on the bench is sort of traditional with my family, and we look upon it as a great honor to be able to serve in such high capacity. The importance of service to the people, justness, fairness and humaneness was instilled into me by my father, who served on the bench before me, and now my son is by branching out into law for himself. Some day, I hope, he will carry on the tradition of which our family has been so proud."

"My conception of the happy way to round out an active and eventful career of service, is to settle down among one's own people and serve them in the capacity which I now am doing. During my career it has been necessary for me to serve in distant places, but now as I approach that time of life, when a man likes to settle down and dwell peacefully among old friends and neighbors, and still continue some measure of service, I am happy to find so many friends so eager to support my purpose."

"Presiding over the various courts at Redwood City, I find none more to my liking than that which deals with the young people starting out on life's pathway. Perhaps, at first they have put the wrong foot forward, but measured, by and large, these are trivial mistakes that can easily be corrected by kindly counsel and opportunity to do the right thing. There is no more interesting problem than that of youth, and I am deeply appreciative of the opportunity given me to help my neighbors in the problems they encounter with their children. I assure them they can always come to me with the knowledge that I am not a judge merely administering the law, but a father as well, trying to help another to set his boy and girl on the right path."

Mr. and Mrs. Harrel Chandler Sr., and Mr. and Mrs. Harrel Chandler Jr. were the honored guests at a reception given at the Chandler home on Hanover street, Saturday evening of last week.

Beauty

In the elevator of a big store she noticed a very attractive poster advertising beauty treatment. Out of curiosity she asked the elevator attendant (a funny little Cockney) where the beauty parlor was.

He turned and gave her a good look, noticed presumably that she did not use make-up at all, and then said, "You don't want ter go there mucking your face about. Why not stay as y'are—plain but 'olesome?"

—Troy Times-Record.

Truss It

She had just begun housekeeping, with the laudable intention of paying ready money upon all occasions, and she entered a high-class poultryer's shop to purchase a chicken.

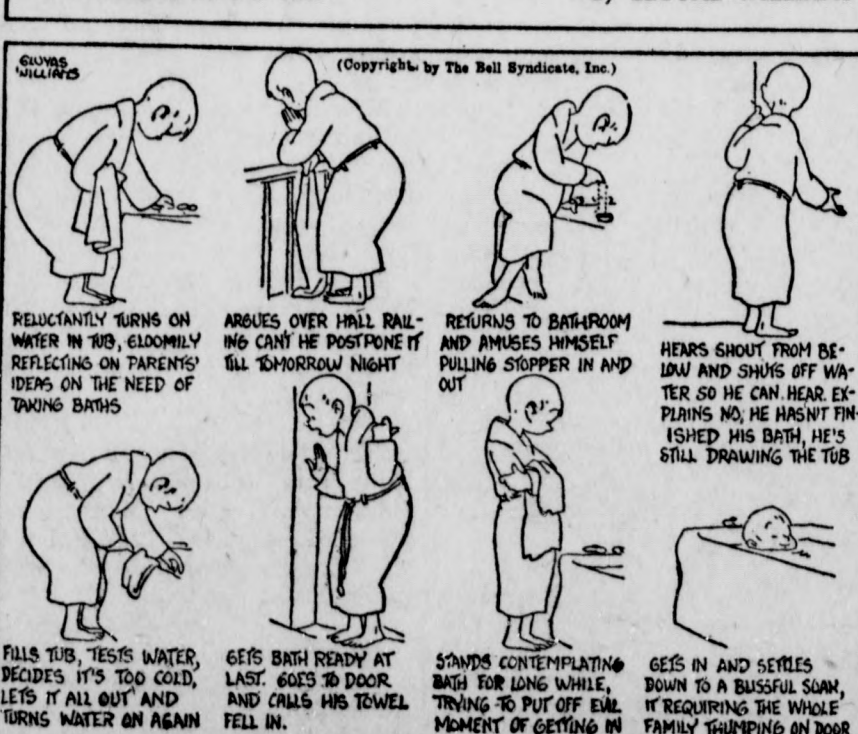

She selected one, and while she was fumbling in her handbag for a purse the shopman politely asked: "Trussed, madam?"

"Oh, dear, no," she indignantly replied. "I wish to pay for it now."

BOY GETTING INTO A TUB

By GLUYAS WILLIAMS

As Was Planned

Mark Twain's old home in the Connecticut hills—destroyed by fire some years ago—was built from the joint designs of his daughter Clara Clemens, and John Howells, son of William Dean Howells, novelist and critic. "They did it," once explained Mark to a friend, "without any advice or instructions from me. I had every confidence in their taste and judgment and none in my own. I merely said I wanted three things—a room of my own that would be quiet, a billiard room large enough to play in without jamming the cues into the wall, and a living room forty feet by twenty."

He did also stipulate that the house should cost only a certain sum. "And did it?" inquired the friend. "Well," said Mark, "half of it did."

Victor In National Meat Essay Contest For United States

A California high school girl—Miss Ardys Colodi of Madera—has just been announced as national champion in the thirteenth national meat essay contest by a committee of prominent home economists meeting in Chicago.

In the same announcement, Kenneth Benbow of Los Angeles is named champion of the western district of twelve states in the national meat poster contest. By virtue of these winnings, both young people are awarded university scholarships. The California contestants won these honors in a field of 14,294 students competing from 520 high schools of 44 states, according to the National Live Stock and Meat Board, the sponsor.

The title of Miss Colodi's winning essay was, "Meat—An Important Article In The Diet." The winning poster drawn by Mr. Benbow emphasized the important place of meat in proper nutrition.

National championship honors in the meat poster contest went to Audrey McDaniel of Fort Scott, Kansas.

IGNITION CONTACTS

Faulty ignition contact points are often the cause of motor failure.

The points should be flat and make good contact with each other, indicated by a frosty appearance over their entire surface.

For satisfactory service the points should be removed occasionally and their platinum surfaces polished on a fine oil stone, but this should be done only by an experienced mechanic.

IGNITION POINTS

When ignition breaker points burn away rapidly it may be a sign that the condenser is defective.

A model of the huge 200 inch Palomar Telescope, now being polished at Pasadena, is shown at the San Diego Exposition in the Palace of Education.

LAST MEET OF CURRENT YEAR

Eighth District Auxiliary To Elect Officers For Coming Term

The last quarterly meeting of the Eighth District of the American Legion Auxiliary for the current year will be held Tuesday, July 21 at room 223 of the Veterans War Memorial building in San Francisco at eight o'clock. District President Mrs. Ethel Pontius will preside.

Annual reports will be given by all the officers to serve for the coming year will be elected.

Mrs. L. N. Zant, assistant publicity chairman, states it is particularly important that delegates and alternates to the coming state convention in Hollywood attend this meeting.

Edison's original phonograph is on display in the Palace of Electricity at the Exposition.

T. H. Fischer of Watsonville was a guest, the latter part of last week, at the home of his daughter Mrs. A. T. Hollingsworth and family in Lawndale.

COMBINED VET ORGANIZATIONS IN JOINT PICNIC

Will Have Dance The Night Before To Dispose Of Silver Set

The second picnic committee of the Joint Picnic of the American Legion and Veteran of Foreign Wars of Daly City was held at Fred Collins' home, Monday evening at 8 o'clock.

All committees are making great progress in their arrangements for the picnic to be held the last Sunday of this month, July 26, at Vallemar Park. For the benefit of those who do not know where this park is, it is down the Skyline, to the left of Salada Beach, about a mile past Sharps Park. Nice large picnic grounds and plenty of parking space.

Children under 15 admitted free. Bring your lunch. Free coffee and free ice cream for the children. Dancing, games and entertainment. Everybody welcome.

The night before this picnic there will be a dance at the American Legion Hall, 474 San Diego avenue, at which time will be held the raffle of a 26 piece silver set. There are still a few tickets left for the ones that have been missed. Remember, it's for balance due on our building.

HIGH SPEED MISSING

Does the engine of your car show a disposition to miss at high speeds?

It may be due, of course, to one of several things but one of the first of the suspect parts should be the breaker points. If they are set too close, missing is bound to occur when the engine is turning over rapidly.

IGNITION WIRES

Replacing spark plugs will not correct ignition trouble if the insulation on wires leading from plugs to distributor is not in good condition.

Often the insulation may appear to be good when closer inspection will reveal slight cracks which tend to permit spark leaks. Insulated wires should be inspected regularly.

Because she played a violin night and day, a court permitted the ejection of Miss Muriel Kane of Detroit from the house she rented.

YOUTH'S JOY RIDE ENDS UNHAPPILY

Nick Perada of A street received a badly cut wrist and chin and numerous bruises, Saturday evening of this week, when the car which he was riding with Angelo Champi, also of Colma, struck a pole at the intersection of Clara street and Junipero Serra boulevard. The two youth walked to the Junipero Serra Hospital a block away, where Nick Perada was given treatment. Angelo Champi, the driver, was uninjured.
